Cass on the day previous town. paid a visit to Philadelphia, on which occasion there was quite a pretty little contest between the aristocracy and the democracy of locofocoism, relative to the arrival and reception of Candidate Cass: The former party-mostly the officials of the Post Office and Custom House-chartered a boat to receive him at Wilmington, and fixed the price at three dollars. This per capita arrangement, which suited the pockets of those who are supported by the public treasury, was not acceptable to the rank and file, who chartered another boat, and placed the passage at one dollar. Mr. Cass was placed somewhat in a dilemma, but finally was over-persuaded by the office-holders, and came with them. This was a position not come in two boats; there was no such a was compelled to define himself.

Sergeant Graeff is a citizen of Reading, well known to every man in this community, who was among the first to volunteer for the war, and has done good service ever since. If any one doubts that the letter is gennine he can see the original by calling at this office.
